

YOUTH SERVICES NARRATIVE

FEBRUARY 2017

February was pretty crazy, with Go-Fore Golf at the end of the month. We had a few more attendees than last year, with 135 coming to regular golf, and 103 at Glow golf in the evening.

My Martic Elementary STEM station program went very well! There were 38 kids there, with marshmallows flying all over the place! The Danger Club activities were especially well-received, with the Legos and the STEM kits a close second and third.

For outreach, I did one daycare story time. I had to cancel one, owing to illness. I also made book crates for Noah's Ark and WSUCC PreK. I also am gathering classroom kits for Linville Hill Elementary about once per month.

I've received the One Book Every Young Child books. These are the children's books that are funded by generous donors at last year's auction. I have 180 copies to give away at preschool visits and tours. I have one visit and five tours planned in March, so a lot of kids will be getting their books!

The Maker Fest is shaping up to be great, with 14 makers signed up! We have everything from blacksmithing, quilting, and wood-crafting, to computer building and 3D printing. Come out on April 8th to see what your neighbors are up to!

Teen Tech Week is coming up during the first full week of March. The teens are doing a talent show on Friday, and there will be a Pokemon scavenger hunt in the library all week. I had to reschedule the Soldering 101 program. I scheduled it for the 10th of March since the schools were to be closed, but a snow day foiled my plans! The new date is May 18th at 5:15pm.

Also during the month of March will be the special Longwood Gardens Community Read programs. We'll be hosting visits from the Delaware Art Museum and the Delaware Museum of Natural History.
